

A network diagram background consisting of a complex web of blue lines connecting various nodes. Some nodes are represented by white circles with blue outlines, while others are solid blue circles. Three nodes are highlighted with a blue and orange gradient. The network is denser on the right side and more sparse on the left.

DYPALL

DEVELOPING YOUTH PARTICIPATION
AT LOCAL LEVEL

360° PARTICIPATORY APPROACH TO YOUTH POLICY DESIGN

During a practical and interactive session, participants will be able to become acquainted with a specific methodological approach, that has been used to support a participatory approach to youth policy design at the regional and local level in Europe.

Nowadays to design a regional or even national youth policy framework is not a complicated process. However, to develop such a process, in a participatory and multi-stakeholder approach, that ensures meaningful participation of young people along the process is another challenge.

During the last years, DYPALL Network has supported public authorities in engaging in these processes, having developed a methodological approach that empowers young people to become political active at the same time that engages the main stakeholders in a collective constructive process .

Our 360 degrees participatory approach to youth policy design, has been developed to ensure that public policy addressing youth, is developed in a sustainable way.

This means engaging all relevant stakeholders along the process and out reaching the ones whom the policies are addressed to.

